Dear Ed:

I'd like to thank you for the difference our new lighting panels have made here in our offices.

The first office we put them in was our reception area. My office manager was always getting headaches while working at her computer and immediately they went away. She hasn't had one since they were installed. We then started adding them throughout the rest of the offices, but before completing the installation, we had someone stop by to Feng Shui our space and she commented on the panels. She then took out an electromagnetic meter to measure any difference between the regular fixtures and the new panels. We found that the electromagnetic field from the regular fixtures reached down from the ceiling approximately 3 feet – well within the average height of most of us. However, the new lighting panels reduced that field to within 4 inches of the fixtures! Florescent lighting is known to drain a persons energy dramatically, and when you spend your entire day under them, it's just not a good thing for anyone. We've since installed them in our home and love the atmosphere they create in both places. Everyone loves them.

What a brilliant idea and health saving concept!

Sincerely yours,

Carmen LaMarca
